

Scaling-up Potential

There is potential to scale up these services in both public and private sectors in urban areas and industrial zones of the country, which would save water and energy.

Recommendation

Implementing advanced water management solutions in urban areas can significantly address water shortages and enhance resource efficiency. By adopting these technologies, cities can ensure a more reliable and sustainable water supply system. A third-party evaluation of the technology's water and energy saving audit is also recommended.

Please scan for more details